P-REX GameLine Paint Remover

- An innovative design that turns synthetic turf paint removal into a one-person job
- A perfect tool for those with frequent field changeovers
- Saves precious man-hours by facilitating all three steps of the GameLine removal process: applies remover solution, agitates, sprays with water
- All residual liquid is instantly vacuumed by a 60" vacuum head into a 55 gal. recovery drum
- Built on a robust, zero-turn vehicle platform and features two 35-gallon rinse water holding tanks
- GameLine Blitz remover solution is stored in a 16-gallon tank and applied via 60" rear-mounted boom sprayer
- 3 quick-release, 20" brush heads with electric lift clear a 60" wide path -- great for end zones and logos
- All wheels have spray nozzles to remove paint and minimize tracking on field
- Patent No.: US 9,732,487 B2

What sets the P-REX apart from other known synthetic turf paint removers in the market is its all-in-one operation. Unlike other paint remover equipment such as the Kromer, although a fine system, the P-REX does a complete removal AND extraction of paint while others only brush paint off the surface which can subsequently lead to what is referred to as "ghosting;" a build-up of old paint that isn't completely removed from a field, leaving faded, cloudy residual from the paint. With the P-REX, ghosting is a non-factor and end-users are able to quickly clear away lines, logos and more with ease. Since its introduction into the sports turf industry, the P-REX is now used on every painted artificial turf field in the NFL and numerous NCAA facilities, such as Riccardo Silva Stadium at Florida International University. Other notable P-REX users in Florida are Camping World Stadium in Orlando and Sports Force Parks Paradise Coast in Naples.
